Bob Jones boosted his salary 300%*. Could you do the same?

A few years ago, he was just another guy. Putting in long hours in a monotonous job. Barely able to make ends meet. No prestige. And no opportunity to get ahead.

But Bob Jones had determination. He looked around and saw other men being promoted. Men with no more on the ball than he had. Except for one thing. Specialized training that made them worth more to their employers.

So then and there Bob made up his mind to get out of the rut he was in. He read an ad for International Correspondence Schools, and mailed the coupon. (The same coupon you see at the bottom of this page.) And though he didn't know it, he'd already taken his first step up.

Soon, Bob was busy studying in his spare time. Learning new skills, and applying them in his work. It wasn't long before he was offered a better job, with a fat increase in pay. Then came other promotions—and each time, more money. Bob Jones was starting to go places. The future was bright. Today, his salary has skyrocketed 300%!

Bob Jones' success story isn't unique. It simply proves what determination can do. You can do it, too, if you're even half as interested in making good. Pick the position you want, and I.C.S. will help you prepare for it. Just as it helped Bob Jones, and hundreds of thousands of others.

Clip this coupon now. Mail it at once. You'll receive 3 valuable booklets—free. They'll prove to you that Bob Jones' success story can be yours!

*The true story of Robert E. Jones, Houston, Texas. From the success files of I.C.S.

More than 7,000,000 men and women have already enrolled with I.C.S.

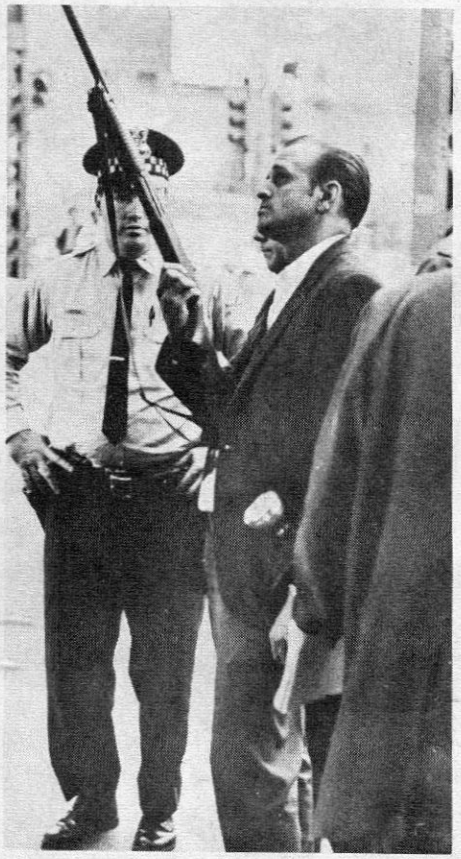
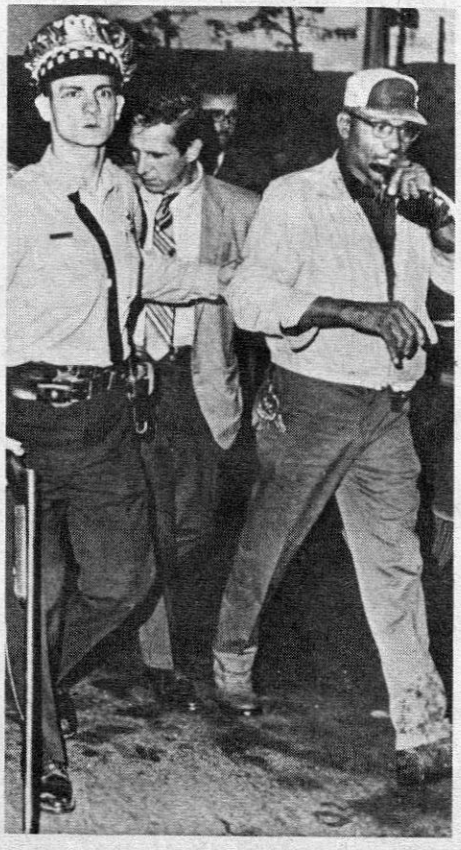
THE VIOLENT WORLD



Las Vegas: Police (above) put $13,500 worth of illegal drugs into pile for bonfire in desert. Newsmen and cops stayed away from fumes. Right: Chicago cops and detectives on alert for snipers. Residents of housing project opened fire when police came to answer call of local store holdup. Robber was slain.



Policeman looks under bed for two Swiss citizens kidnapped in Cali. 7,000 officers conducted house-to-house search. Right: Chicago cops escort man to paddy wagon during sniper trouble. He was near scene of shooting and had a shotgun. During 3-hour battle, seven cops wounded, as was an innocent girl.

Dreams of others have come true

"Duraclean brought me security and an education for my daughters. We've done as much as $3,000 on a single job." Blanche B. Mass.

"The professional quality of Duraclean Service has earned the respect of carpet dealers and wholesalers. I've earned $117.50 in an eight-hour day." R. W. Ohio

"Making 50% more than on any job I ever had. I've earned as high as $1,300 in a single week, as much as $2,700 on one job." J. S. Fla.

Your Dreams Can Become a Reality with your own Duraclean Franchise

Hundreds of men—previously working for salaries or wages—now enjoy greatly increased incomes, personal independence, and secure futures as owners of their own businesses under the Duraclean Franchise

Unthinking men may tell you that the day is past when an individual can build a successful business of his own. The fact is that Franchising has opened a wonderful new world of opportunity for such men. The "mama and papa" grocery store, and the corner druggist have succumbed to the gigantic chains. But, in their place an exciting new kind of business abounds with big profit opportunities for the individual.

For twenty years the "service industry" has been growing with fantastic speed. Let the chains have the retail store business. Even a small business providing an unusual service can bring profits to the individual that were unheard of in the old days. And, unlike the chains, the service business today, is thriving under Franchising.

What is the difference? Just this: A chain is a large number of stores in a chain all operating under the same plan; under the same well-known name; but are owned by one corporation. In Franchising, the individual uses tested and proven plans for starting his business and building it; he operates under a Nationally Advertised and well-known name, he has step by step guidance but he owns the business. He enjoys the advantages of chain recognition, but he keeps all the net profits for himself.

The Duraclean Franchise is such a business. No store to rent. No fixtures to buy. No inventory or stock of goods to pay for. No office or work-room required. And, no special education or experience is needed for success. Men of almost every educational level have made glowing successes with the "know-how" furnished by our Company. They've worked from their homes as all Duraclean Service is given on the premises of the customer. In the beginning they've used the family car as all equipment can be carried in the trunk. Their only investment has been a cash outlay of less than a $1000.

What is Duraclean Service. It is a modern method of cleaning and reviving color and resilience of carpets, rugs, upholstered furniture and auto interiors—a method that has almost unbelievable superiority over the old way of harsh scrubbing with water, strong detergents, and power driven brushes. Tests made by an independent laboratory show that the Duraclean "Absorption Method" removes twice as much dirt and soil removed by machine scrubbing. And, the carpets and upholstery are dry and ready to use a few hours after cleaning. In addition to cleaning and reviving, you have five other equally superior services to increase profits. The improved Duraclean process has proved so superior that Duraclean Services are now available through a world wide organization.

Who are the customers? The finest homes in your community, yes. But, of equal importance hotels, motels, schools, shops, stores, offices, theaters, hospitals, and institutions. The commercial business is big and because much of this work can be done evenings or Saturdays, many men have started in spare time without giving up their jobs or pay checks. When they have seen from actual experience that Duraclean could pay them many times their former salaries, they have resigned the old job and become independent businessmen—with all the added respect and standing that a businessman has in his community.

If you've ever had a really strong desire to "some day own your own business" the Duraclean Franchise is well worth investigating. We have no salesmen to try to influence you. The entire Duraclean Opportunity is explained in detail in a 24-page book. This book will be mailed free to any man sincerely interested in a future of security and independence. Just your name and address is all that's needed. Send it today. After reading all the facts, if you decide to take the next step, you can write again and let us know.

We'll help you with financing, with training, with equipment, and with all our years of experience in showing other men how to make their dreams become realities. To investigate costs nothing and does not place you under the slightest obligation. Is this something you should do for yourself? Today?

ONE NIGHT OF HELL IN A HOUSE OF NAKED

by JOHN CUNNINGHAM

"HELLO, DOC. Thanks for calling. How is she?" Detective Kindel asked, as he put a leather case on a chair in the hospital office.

"Well, Sergeant, she's made a hell of a lot of improvement since your people brought her in here day before yesterday. We've brought her out of a state of hysterical shock and now the problem is to treat her for multiple burns, abrasions and bruises on almost every part of her body. Did you see her?"

"No, the ambulance crew picked her up, and we had nothing to go on until we found out who she was. She didn't fit any of our Missing Persons reports."

"Yes, well that's why I called, Sergeant. This morning she told a nurse that her name was Sonya Markley. I had issued orders to let me know as soon as she talked, but not to encourage her to say anything until you got over here.'

"Yeah, thanks, Doc. What does she look like?"

"When you first see her you notice that she is extremely overweight, probably over 200 pounds. She's about five something tall, I'd guess about 36 years old and has fairly nice features. I'd also guess that she is fairly intelligent, although we haven't had any conversation. But that woman sure fell into the hands of some sadistic bastards!"

"What about the medical report, Doc?"

"As you know, she came in here as an unknown emergency. They called me to the receiving room after a preliminary examination, and I've never seen anything like it. The woman was in severe shock and we had to get on that immediately. In a more thorough examination later we tested for internal injuries but found nothing serous. Her body is a mass of welts, burns and bruises and there was evidence of multiple rape. We took X-Rays yesterday and there don't seem to be any broken bones. I would say that her general health was good."

"What do you think caused the injuries, Doc?"

"It could be almost anything, belts, sticks or bare hands. The burns were probably caused by cigarettes or matches. (Continued on page 16)

IN THE PAIN!

Torture—rape—horror—and that was only half of the hell that the gang of drunken sadists inflicted on the flesh of their kidnapped victim!

I thought I was going to a party, but before the night was finished I found out the party was on me.

Have you found out anything, Sergeant?"

"Not really, Doc. We checked out the guy who picked her up early that morning out on the old Quarry Road. He was clean, a fellow on his way to work. He saw this woman staggering along the roadside, stark naked and dazed. He stopped, said she was muttering incoherently and would scream every few minutes. I'll give the guy credit, he didn't panic, got her into his car and phoned us from a gas station about two miles from where he picked her up."

"I'll be dammed! You know, Sergeant, if I were a detective I'd guess this woman had been mauled and raped by a number of men. It figures, she's big and husky enough to fight off one man before all that damage could be inflicted."

"You're probably right, Doc. But right now we need some answers on who, where and how. Could I see her now?"

"Yes, I'll take you to her room. What's in the case, Sergeant?"

"A tape recorder. I thought maybe I could get her to talk more freely and with less embarassment if I came alone."

"Yes, well, that's considerate. Come on, Sergeant. I'll take you to her room and I hope you can get a lead on what happened. Will you let me know?"

"Yeah, Doc, I'll let you know."

As they reached the closed door of the woman's room, the doctor spoke with habitual professionalism when he cautioned, "Now, don't take too long and wear her out, Sergeant." Then he opened the door and both men walked in quietly. The woman turned her head toward them and said nothing, but a note of question was written on her face when she saw the Sergeant and his leather case. The doctor greeted her pleasantly:

"Well, good afternoon, And I guess we can call you Sonya now, is that right?"

The woman nodded and the doctor went on to introduce Sergeant Kindel, as from the County Police detective bureau, and explained that he wanted to talk with her for awhile. The woman nodded understanding and Sergeant Kindel smiled reassuringly. The doctor left the room, closing the door softly and the detective knew instinctively that his first task would be to put the woman at ease and in a mood to talk.

"SONYA," HE began, "may I call you that?

She nodded assent and he pulled a chair to her bedside. Speaking slow and softly, Detective Kindel continued:

"Sonya, I'm here to help you.

PROVEN IN THE LABS — PROVEN ON THE ROAD — PROVEN ON THE INDIANAPOLIS SPEEDWAY — and finally released to the public!

Yes, proven at Indianapolis — proven in the same test laboratories used by Ford, General Motors and Chrysler . . . proven by the world's largest automobile fleet owners! An exciting new scientific "breakthrough" that means . . . no matter what kind of gas you use . . . no matter what kind of car you own you can now pile up 100 miles of driving a week, month after month and fill your gas-tank as little as once a month . . . pile up 100 miles of driving a day all 365 days of the year . . . and save up to 500 gallons of gas each year!

NOW! 30 DAYS OF DRIVING ON A SINGLE TANK OF GAS!

— even more startling, now save up to $16 a month, up to 50 gallons of gas each month, without changing a single part on your car!

Laboratory reports . . . PLUS road tests conducted on Indianapolis proving grounds reveal you may now get as much as 37 miles of driving from each gallon of gas . . . save up to 50 gallons of gas each month . . . save up to $200 on your car each year!

Six months ago, for perhaps the first time in history, the United States Government issued patent protection to an invention that has been classified ILLEGAL! Sound strange? Not really here's why:

I'm sure you're familiar with the famous gasoline-economy tests run by all the major oil companies. Well, do you know that the remarkable new invention described on this page is actually banned from these tests because it is TOO EFFECTIVE! Do you know that because this invention saves so much gasoline . . . that because it gives so much economy, it is actually ILLEGAL for a test-driver to fit one on his car! And do you know that because it boosts gasoline mileage up to 11 more miles per gallon . . . it has actually been OUTLAWED in every recognized cross-country economy run . . . simply because the officials who conduct these tests were forced to rule that it gives all cars that have it AN UNFAIR ADVANTAGE!

In other words, if you are a person planning on entering one of these cross-country economy runs . . . then this message is not for you. YOU JUST WON'T BE ALLOWED TO USE THIS NEW INVENTION–SORRY, BUT IT'S SIMPLY ILLEGAL. BUT — if you are a person who is not interested in setting any records . . . who is only interested in getting more miles per gallon than you ever dreamed possible — and doing it the very same way that many of America's leading corporations are doing at this very moment — then what you are about to read is perhaps the most thrilling and exciting news in automotive history.

TEST DRIVERS REPORT UP TO 11 MORE MILES PER GALLON —

The name of this great new invention is the G. T. ENERGY CHAMBER . . . and there is no ketter way to describe to you the increased performance and economy it will give you . . . than to tell you of the "bombshell effect" it had on research scientists and test-drivers, who simply refused to believe their own gasoline gauges when they first tried it out. Look:

CUTS GASOLINE COSTS TO AS LITTLE AS 1¢ A MILE

1. When the G. T. ENERGY CHAMBER was first tested by the same research laboratories used by Ford, General Motors and Chrysler . . . results were so overwhelming, (a staggering increase of up to 68 per cent) . . . it actually lowered gasoline costs to as little as ONE CENT A MILE.

2. When tests were made by the world's leading auto rental system with this incredible money saving invention . . . and then test-run on the road and on such world famous proving grounds as the Indianapolis Speedway . . . the test-drivers of these vehicles were absolutely amazed to see big 8 cylinder sedans get better gas-mileage than small European economy cars!

3. When large fleet owners and some of the nation's largest taxi fleets tested this great new invention to determine just how much gas it would save them . . . the results were so dramatic that within 30 days they reported savings of not hundreds . . . but thousands of gallons of gas the very first month alone!

UP TO 500 MILES OF DRIVING FROM A SINGLE TANK OF GAS

Yes, from test after test . . . road tests, laboratory tests, tests by some of the world's most famous drivers . . . come reports of cars that drive for hundreds and hundreds of miles ON A SINGLE TANK OF GAS! Reports of test cars from Ford, General Motors, Chrysler that get more miles per gallon today than when they were brand new! Reports of big, luxury sedans that weigh 2½ times more than small European cars . . . yet get better mileage, better performance and huge dollar savings thanks to this new miracle invention.

BEST PROOF OF ALL!

World's Leading Rent-A-Car Company Road-Tests Amazing New Invention For 3 Solid Months . . . Then Orders Fleet Of Cars IMMEDIATELY EQUIPPED! they report "Savings of up to 54 gallons a month per car"

Yes, from one of the nation's largest automobile fleet owners comes the most dramatic proof of all . . . A company that spends more money on gasoline in one weekend than the average person spends in a lifetime . . . they tested this incredible new invention and here is what they found. BOOSTED GASOLINE MILEAGE A WHOPPING 32% ON ALL CARS TESTED. Wouldn't you like to save up to $200 a year on your car? For full details read the rest of this page.

IF IT WORKS SUCH MILEAGE-MIRACLES, HOW COME THE CAR MANUFACTURERS HAVEN'T INSTALLED THIS TYPE UNIT IN THEIR CARS? — THE ANSWER IS THAT TWO ALREADY HAVE!

By now you are probably wondering just what is the G. T. ENERGY CHAMBER . . . and how does it work? Well, to make a long story short . . . if you were to look under the hood of one of those $20,000 European luxury cars like the Maseratti or the Aston-Marton, you would see sitting in those engines . . . a special gasoline unit . . . especially designed to extract more blazing power, more energy from each gallon of gasoline. This remarkable booster-unit is what gives these cars such magnificent performance . . . such TOTAL POWER . . . such increased engine efficiency.

And this is precisely what the G. T. ENERGY CHAMBER is designed to do — enable your engine to extract more piston-driving power, more raw, blazing energy and more gasoline economy . . . ONLY, instead of costing $100 to $150 (like the European booster-units) . . . the G. T. ENERGY CHAMBER costs but a mere fraction.

That's because after years of intensive research automotive experts have finally found a way to simplify these booster units . . . reduce the number of parts in each unit . . . mass produce them . . . slash costs to a mere fraction . . . and make them available at a price so low it's almost too ridiculous to mention. Why do you realize what this means to you if you are a person who is determined to save yourself up to $16 a month on your gas bills . . . up to 50 gallons of gas each month . . . yes, up to $200 a year on wasted gasoline.

INSTALLS IN MINUTES — PAYS FOR ITSELF IN AS LITTLE AS 15 DAYS!

It means that no matter what kind of car you now have . . . no matter how old that car may be . . . no matter what condition it is in . . . no matter how many miles you pile on each month . . . here at last is the automotive discovery you've long dreamed about . . . and has now come true.

Because, from this day on you too can now save up to 500 gallons of gas each and every year. NOW you too can drive for weeks and weeks on end without ever stopping at a service station. Now you too can drive across 6 states of the union on just a single tank of gas, blaze a trail from New York to Chicago on just 2 or 3 tankfuls. In other words, perform mileage miracles that only yesterday you thought were impossible.

So if you too want to achieve the same wondrous results as America's largest automotive fleet owners, by Indianapolis test-drivers, and by research scientists at the very same testing laboratories used by Ford, Chrysler and General Motors, then take advantage of this special Free-Trial introductory offer. Remember, all you risk is the few minutes it takes to fill out the special reservation coupon below, and you have a lifetime of driving convenience and economy to gain.

THIS OFFER EXPIRES IN 15 DAYS — YOU MUST ACT NOW!

Now the price of the G. T. ENERGY CHAMBER on this special introductory offer is not the 15 or 20 dollars you might expect . . . but only $5.95. Why, you'll save up to 10 times that amount in gasoline savings in no time at all . . . not to mention the hundreds of gallons of gasoline and hundreds of dollars in money you save year after year.

However, due to the enormous demands of trucking companies, car-rental companies, taxicab fleets and other large users, only a limited number of G. T. ENERGY CHAMBERS can possibly be allocated each month for consumer orders. Therefore, all orders must be filled on a first-come, first-served basis. So to take advantage of this limited introductory offer . . . mail the no-risk coupon today!

LOOK HOW EASY IT IS!

All you do is simply attach the G. T. ENERGY CHAMBER on your fuel line. Since it is a precision instrument, with a special model for each make car, there are no special adjustments for you to make. They've already been made for you at the factory. You simply screw it into place . . . and that's all. In fact, it's so easy you need not know a single thing about an engine to install it — and easy picture directions accompany each unit. Total installation time: 3 to 5 minutes. Total savings on gas: up to $200 a year!

NEW HOPE FOR AN EASY CURE!

Male sex failure is sometimes the result of a medical disorder. But the latest scientific research has uncovered a far more common cause, one that can be easily cured!

by ANDREW McPARTLAND, ScD.

■ AS ANYONE WHO knew them could tell you, the C—s were an ideal couple, still passionately in love after four years of marriage. Harry was a strapping six-footer, the picture of health, and May was as pretty and full-bodied a girl as ever decided to marry instead of going into modelling. Only one thing darkened the C—s' lives: though they had been trying desperately to have another baby, their three-and-a-half-year-old Harry, Jr., seemed destined to remain an only child.

"I can't understand it," May said to the doctor in despair. "If we'd never been able to have any children, that would have been something else. But little Harry was conceived on our honeymoon. What's changed? What's different?"

The answer was nothing, apparently. Tests and an intensive physical examination demonstrated that May's capacity to become pregnant and bear babies was absolutely normal. As for Harry, though every microscopic count showed him to be in the lower ranges of fertility, the count was still high enough to achieve conception under ordinary circumstances—especially in view of the couple's two (Continued on page 36)

CANARIS THE NAZI SPY WHO MURDERED FOR FUN

by ATWOOD J. MATINBURY

IT WAS, I believe, in 1938 that I met Canaris personally. I was only 12 at the time. My parents were visiting Germany where a cousin, a member of the consular staff, had occasion to meet with the Admiral. I don't remember too much about him. He was small. I do recall that. And he had the coldest blue eyes of any human being I ever met, before or since. I was told, later that day after he had left, the Wilhelm Canaris was Germany's greatest spy, the head of the Abwehr (Secret Service) and an important man in the German high command.

It was ten years later before I returned to Germany again. This time it was as a very junior officer in the army of occupation. I heard nothing of Canaris then. No one seemed to know what had happened to him.

In the 1950's finished with army service, by some accident or other, I happened to mention to a friend of mine the small incident about Canaris.

"You interested in that sort of thing?" he asked. "Just happened to see some notes on the man. He's dead, you know!"

"How?" I asked. "The war? Or war crimes trials?"

"No. . .Hitler killed him. Had him hanged. The old secret agent was mixed up in the bomb plot. But read the papers for yourself. I'll send them to you, tomorrow."

I read those brief notes. My interest was really involved. And so, for the past several years, I made it my business to find out all I could about Canaris. I've talked to his associates. . . .those who survived, that is. . . .and to quite a few who worked under him in the Abwehr. It was a long, hard job piecing things together. Because Wilhelm Canaris was one of the strangest, most secretive persons who ever lived.

If ever a man was devoted to cold-blooded efficiency, it was Canaris. No method was above him; nothing was below him. He used any and every method of intelligence that had ever been invented. And it was all so much a part of his life that no one could tell where his job ended and his personal life began.

Take his relationships with women, for example. During his tenure as chief of the Abwehr, he was involved with more than a hundred of them. And yet, who can say whether or not he was satisfying his needs or just using them as tools of his trade. For it's a fact that almost every one of them in the end gave him information he wanted.

Quite a few he betrayed.

One who survived was Anna M——. "I met Canaris at a party in Berlin in November 1942," she told me. "I was attracted to him immediately. There was something so unbending about him, so strong, so purposeful about him that it was as if he were a challenge to my womanhood. I determined to (Continued on page 44)

NEW CLUES TO THE LOST TREASURE OF BAGDAD

by STARK HAYMER

EVERY DAME I ever met had one thing in common. They were all just nuts about money. And this one wasn't any different. Can't say I blame her very much. I get a bit loving myself at the sight of the long green. But still.....

Now this gal was something to look at. A body? But yes. Definitely yes. She must have been wearing the happiest brassiere east of Suez and that takes in a lot of territory. The rest of her matched perfectly. I can give you that information from personal observation.

She wasn't the least bit bashful. Quite the contrary. Given a choice she was one woman who preferred to be out of her clothes rather than in them. Why the first time I walked into her apartment there she was, naked as a jaybird.

Actually I'd dropped in completely uninvited. Still, she never batted an eyelid. She didn't have to. One look at her and I stopped dead in my tracks. I stared. I admit it. I might have been a twelve year old at his first visit to a Burleycue the way my eyes popped. But where do you see flesh like hers these days.

Now Bagdad in the middle of summer is hot. No sane man would spend his time there, at least not if he could help it. It's not only uncomfortable, but unemployed

We carried supplies and the gems to a small mountain village. We knew somebody was after us and it made good sense to lay low for a while.

Americans are not exactly loved.

But what could I do? I WAS unemployed. And even worse, I was flat broke. I could have contacted the American Consul, of course, but that was a last resort. Something told me that while the consul might be glad to see me, I wouldn't be exactly happy to see him. There might have been some minor misunderstanding about a purported case of smuggling. Naturally I wasn't involved. Still, there was no sense in asking for trouble. So when this character asked me to keep an eye on his wife—he had an idea she was playing some extra-curricular games—I took the assignment. Especially since he was going to pay me for the job.

Slipping into her apartment was child's play. And that's when I first ran into her. Right at that moment I forgot about my assignment. Hell, for a girl like that I could forget about almost anything.

"Hi," she said.

"Hi," I said right back. And we continued to stare at each other. I think I was getting the best of that bargain.

"Well stupid," she finally managed to nurmer, "don't just stand there. Come over here and sit down. I suppose Eric sent you."

"Eric?" I looked blank.

"My husband, silly. I can't think of any other reason you might be dropping in, unless you're a thief. An there isn't anything here worth stealing, as you can see." She waved her arm in a circle around the room. "Unless of course you want to steal me."

The idea was definitely appealing. I grinned.

"Look lady," I started to explain, "It's nothing like that at all. Your husband hired me to..."

"To catch me with my lover. That's it, isn't it," she broke in. "The fool. The utter damn fool. Believe me, if I wanted another man, I'd hardly have to go to this much trouble. I detest fools. So you can go right back to him and tell him that there's nothing to report. That's the truth, so far ..... that is, unless you'd like to stay here a while and amuse me." She laughed, a low, soft, tinkly kind of laugh.

"Look lady," I began again.

"No you look. I'm sure you can get more out of it than I can... unless you'd care to take off a few clothes. Then I'll be glad to look. Anyway I'm no lady and my name is Karen, if you're interested."

OK then. What would you have done? So I stayed. It was the beginning of a very interesting friendship.

It was easy too. And profitable. I had every reason in the world to keep close to her. I was supposed to be spying on her, wasn't I. Her husband was paying me well for the job. The situation couldn't have been better.

But nothing lasts for ever. I guess old Eric wasn't as dumb as I thought he was. Because about a month later we got caught. Seems the SOB hadn't trusted me as completely as I'd thought. He had the gall to hire a second spy to keep an eye on me. For all I knew he might even have had a third one watching the second.

He burst in on us at the most inconvenient moment, ranting like a maniac and waving a pistol.

Maybe he wasn't as dumb as I thought, but he wasn't very smart, either. In my league you use a pistol for shooting, not for waving. You can't shoot straight with a pistol even under the best of circumstances. Damnably undependable weapon. But when you're sliding it around from target to target, the odds are fifty to one you can't hit anything at all. I've been shot at by experts. I wasn't guessing. I knew.

I jumped the idiot. Sure he fired. His bullet went into the wall six feet to the right of me. He never had a chance to pull a second shot. I beat the Hell out of him. I don't like being shot at. Not even when they miss me.

So now I had to get out of town. It didn't take much to convince Karen to come with me. Wives of pistol waving husbands usually do convince easy. Who knows, the next time he missed somebody he might just as likely hit her—purely by accident you understand. But that wouldn't be much use to her.

We grabbed our clothes and took off—but fast. Karen had a car. We used it.

About 70 miles southwest of Bagdad is the old city of Karbala. It's nothing particular. There's little of the elegance of Bagdad there. But it did possess one thing that made it fairly attractive at the time. It was the home of an old friend of mine, an Iraqi, now retired, with whom in days past I'd done a bit of adventuring. I shan't mention his name since at this point I have no intention of giving any government authorities a clue to his identity.

For old time's sake he welcomed us. And true to his code—and mine—he asked no questions. He put us up and took care of us for some days.

At the end of the week, however, he approached me. "My friend," he said, "we have done much business together, in the past. We have shed blood together and broken bread together. We have shared problems, dangers and rewards. But now as you know, I have retired. My sons are grown and strong. They are well married and have much honor and I would do nothing to harm them or their children, certainly nothing that would cause them to lose respect. Still, there is a profit to be made. You are a man who will not betray me. First, you too respect the lives we have shared and second, if you did, you would never leave this land alive. My sons and my cousins are many and they would be an extension of my right arm. This is kinship and this is honor. You agree?"

Naturally I agreed. What did I have to lose. I said as much.

He smiled. "To lose? Only your life which is not much, for all lives end sooner or later. And your woman which is less, since women are as many as the sands of the desert, even a woman such as yours. To gain? A great deal, since I offer you freely a third share in a treasure that is so vast that even the Caliphs of old would have slaughtered a nation to gain it.

"IN THE YEARS before our independance, when the Turks were rulers here, a caravan of a great Pasha was once traveling from Bagdad to Damascus. For reasons of precaution, they did not take the river route to Syria, but instead they headed straight west across the desert.

"A sandstorm came. It was the will of Allah. The caravan perished. Then, thirty years ago, I found that caravan. There was a great treasure of gold and precious stones. I took some of the gold. I was still young and foolish and failed to realize that one stone can be worth a thousand pieces of gold. I meant to go back. but a certain incident, a blood feud intervened. The man I killed was a distant relative of the King. I had to flee the country.

"The things I did since then are known to you. But they are also known to others. Were I suddenly to appear with a vast treasure, certain words would be said and if I were not secretly killed and my house robbed, it would be very strange indeed. For others have heard of this treasure and covet it.

But suppose a friend, a trusted friend were to find that treasure. And suppose that instead of returning here he were to take it to Mosul and there seek out a man whose life by custom and blood belongs to me. And if that man were to sell that treasure quietly and slowly and deposit the proceeds in a most reliable bank. Of course that man would want a profit. And that is right. So a third would go to him. And the last third would be mine and it would be sufficient. I could draw on the bank and who could suspect, for in my lifetime I have done many things that gave me profit. So, you will do it? A third for you, a third for my friend and a third for me."

Things are expensive west of Bagdad. It cost us two hundred smackarooties to get hold of some oversize ballon tires for Karen's car. Lucky I've handled an oxyacetelyne torch, because no one else in town was capable of cutting through her fender to make room for the new wheels. But at least we could now roll through the rough country. Folks thought we were a bit touched in the head, but I'd pulled deals like this before. Of it worked in Libya, it would work in Iraq.

We loaded up the backseat with food and plenty of water and took off westward. It was a ball. The car bounced and shook like hell, but the springs were good. It held. According to the story we let out we were heading for Damascus to get away from Karen's husband. That the Arabs understood. Woman stealing is an old and honorable profession in the desert country.

The first night camping out was perfection. We suddenly realized that this was really the first time we'd actually been alone, without a threat of interruption since we'd met. We made the most of it. I don't think we got more than two hours sleep between twilight and sunrise.

Finding the treasure would be easy. We had instructions so specific a baby could have done it. But we had to make certain we weren't being followed. That wasn't hard, either. The second night we broke camp an hour after darkness and drove through the night doubling back in a huge circle. It caused us to have wasted the entire second day's travel since we ended up back at our first night's campground. But it enabled us to be absolutely certain that no one was on our trail. Even the lightest footed desert hijacker leaves traces. There were none. We were satisfied

It took us three full days to reach the point at which we were aiming. We didn't hurry. There was no need to. In fact the slower we went the better. Our target was a good hundred miles from the nearest oasis. If anyone had picked us up, unless they were well prepared in advance it was going to make it tough as hell on them. There are no water taps in that country and unless a man is well prepared, he doesn't dawdle around on a wild gamble.

The treasure itself was at the base of a stark, dead, outcrop of rock. We hit it dead on the nose, exactly as planned. Facing the prevailing wind as it did, a huge dune of sand had piled up against one face of it. Somewhere in that dune lay more than forty million dollars.

We were equipped for the job. I had brought a large tarpaulin with me. So we merely dug a small, ditch covering about an area of three or four cubic yards, worked in the tarp, ballooned it in the sand like a parachute, tying ropes from all corners to our front bumper. As we backed away the sand came too. Sure it was work, hard work, but it was easier than shoveling the whole mass.

We operated from twilight on, by our headlamps. It was cooler. Cut drive, cut and drive. Haul out a load and then go back and do it all over again.

I don't know how much sand we moved. I'm no engineer. But it was a lot. It took us two and a half nights to hit the main caravan.

But it was well worth it. The moment we struck paydirt we knew that. The tarp had caught a couple of boxes. They had dried out practically to dust and split into a million fragments. Even in the headlights of the car we could see the flashing beams reflected from a thousand pieces of jewelry, red, green and brilliant white.

We stopped hauling then, naturally. We'd have to wait for daylight now. We certainly didn't want to chance losing our fortune in the shifting sands.

The next day was sheer heaven. At first sign of daylight we were down on our hands and knees, searching through the sand, sifting it, pouring it through our fingers as we tried to trace down the lovely jewels. They were lying all over

EXPOSED: THE TRUTH ABOUT NYMPHOMANIACS!

(The author of this article is a distinguished student of mental disorders who engages widely in private practice. He has adopted this pseudonym, and uses fictitious identities throughout the article, in order to protect the privacy of his patients whose cases are described herein.)

BY H. TREVELYAN ■ You meet her at a party. She is probably pretty and certainly well-groomed. She may be a trifle demure at first, but her fashionable dress displays her body a little more than is absolutely necessary. When her eyes meet yours there is a hint of invitation in them. The drinks are good, the party lively and sooner or later you get together.

She says, "It's so stuffy in here. Why don't we go somewhere less crowded?"

The way she says it tells you it is not the crowd or the smoke that bothers her. She really wants to be alone, so you go back to your place or hers. It makes little difference. When you get there you embrace, you kiss, and she is suddenly all over you, clinging, tearing at your clothes and her own. "Take me," she says. "I can't stand it. Take me now."

Like any normal male, you meet the challenge with your best efforts. When it is over, you congratulate yourself. This, you think, is it. What you have heard about and hoped for—a girl who can't say no.

If she really is, my friend, you are toying with dynamite.

In the sexual folklore of American males, the ultimate in good fortune is to meet a woman whose resistance is practically nil, whose appetite is insatiable, who is constantly and enthusiastically available. A woman who is, in short, a nymphomaniac.

Such a woman, so goes the myth, will inspire a man to heights of sexual activity beyond his wildest dreams by the sheer force of her own brimming passion. She will initiate him into mysteries of love-play seldom heard of and less often practiced. She lurks, in the words of Dr. Benjamin Morse, a "darkly erotic figure" in the minds of all youths and most men—a woman who offers bedroom athletics without limit, a minimum of tiresome preliminaries and no need for emotional entanglement.

Like all myths, this one contains a grain of truth. But the chances are overwhelmingly against

TRAPPED BY THE CREEPING HORDE OF DEATH

by ARNE ENGSTROM

I WAS WALKING on my tip-toes, strolling gingerly up the rocky path towards the little Volvo coupe. There was still some more color film on the front seat. Suddenly, agonized screams shattered the stillness of the sun-drenched fjord.

"Arne! Arne! THEY'RE ALL OVER ME!!"

For a moment I paused—puzzled. "What's the matter honey?" I called, laughing. "Mosquito trouble?"

What the devil could she be yelling about? There weren't any people around this neck of the woods—we'd motored all the way down just to be alone.

Again a shrill howl echoed through the crisp air. The unearthly yell sounded like it was straight out of a nightmare. "They're everywhere!" she sobbed hysterically. "Please Please! HELP ME ARNE!"

I looked down the stony path. Through the spindly trees I could barely make out a flash of pink—Lise's bare body —fighting wildly against a surging tide of something—something yellowish-brown. Lise was a well-trained athlete—self-reliant. She wasn't the clinging-vine type given to panic.

She shrieked again and again—I knew she was in some horrible trouble. Above me the underbrush bristled faintly. Then I saw one of them. It skittered down the path and crawled toward me. A lemming! It eyed me for a fleet second, its thick fur matted with dirt and mold. Then, like a cobra, it shot at me, its mouth wide open!

Quickly, desperately, I reached above me for a

☐ Mated

Edited by Joseph Dow, M.D. The new, pictorial marital manual. All twelve chapters contain illustrations and/or photos of all aspects of married sexuality.

Of special interest, because of its uniqueness, is the chapter entitled Coital Positions, wherein seventy-eight different postures are described and thirty-five of the most popular are actually illustrated. No dolls are used, no other misleading or incomplete illustrations.

The chapter entitled Hygienic Products is of equal interest because of its uniqueness. It includes illustrations of such seldom-seen objects as vaginal inserts, artificial penes (dildos), French ticklers, clitoris stimulators, erection aids, female masturbation devices (including vibrators), penis-enlargement devices, breast development instruments, climax-withholding aids, penis extensions, douching devices, etc.

Other chapters include: Evolution of the Human Embryo; The Male Genital System; The Female Reproductive System; Abortion and Premature Labor; Coital Movements; Multiple Pregnancies; Anatomy of the Breasts; The Art of Love; Sterility and Impotence. Price only $5.00

☐ Pedophilia

A psycho-behavioral, geographical and historical study of adult-child sexual relations, by Dr. John F. Trimble. Twenty-one case-histories form the basis of Dr. Trimble's book.

These include: a lesbian actress and 11-year-old Mexican prostitutes; a girl trained by her mother to blackmail pedophilics; an incestuous mother-daughter relationship; childhood experiences with male pedophilic homosexuals; a soldier who used his 7-year-old step-daughter for sodomy; a sadistic matron and her sexual experiences with children.

Other chapters involve pedophilia's universal character; pedophilic behavior in America, the Orient, in Europe and in India; pedophilia and the law, the psychodynamics of pedophilia.

This is the most complete and up-to-date book on the subject. Fully illustrated, including color plates. $3.00.

Oral Love Volumes

☐ Entitled Cunnilingus and Fellatio, by John F. Trimble, Ph.D. The first book-length study on the subjects and the only illustrated volume available on cunnilingus and fellatio. Contains color plates as well as black/white illustrations.

All aspects of the two subjects are covered, including initiation, homosexual and heterosexual case-histories, childhood experiences, cunnilingus/fellatio as marriage aids, soixante-neuf (69) practices, lesbian techniques, historical aspects of c/f, adults initiating children (both girls and boys);

Reasons wives/husbands practice/oppose fellatio and cunnilingus, oral-genital fantasy-wishes, normal and abnormal techniques, extremes in love/hatred for c/f, prostitutes and fellatio, the compulsive fellatrice, sadism and masochism in oralgenitalism, the oral-erotic wife, teen-aged girls specializing in fellatio, etc. A Monogram book. $3.00.

☐ Entitled Fellatio. By Donald H. Gilmore, Ph.D. Fully illustrated volume, published by Monogram Books. Subtitled "A Study of Normal and Abnormal Oral Sex Behavior."

Chapters are entitled: Normal Erotic Stimulation, Fellatio in History, Oragenital Contacts in Childhood, Teen-Aged Fellatio, Oral Sex in Marriage, Fellatio Techniques, Abnormal Fixations, The Castration Complex, The Urge to Dominate, Obsession, The Prevention of Disease, Bizarre Cases, Guidelines to Normal Sexuality.

Twenty-nine case-histories are included, giving insight into people with marital problems caused by or solved by oral sex practices.

Subjects include: teen-ager girls submitting to fellatio to maintain their virginity, wives seeking divorces for such actions, other wives who seek fellatio out of marriage, kidnapped girls forced to perform fellatio by sex criminals, high school girls indulging in oral sex acts on teachers to obtain passing grades;

Women who obtain climaxes during acts of fellatio, women who prefer oral sex to coitus, sanctified oral sexuality, multiple fellatio (one girl and five boys), desire for oral sexuality caused by seeing parents or other adults in oral-genital acts, etc. $3.00.

☐ Bestiality in Men & Women

By David O. Cauldwell, M.D. A study of sex relations between humans and animals. Described are the animals used, reactions of both animals and humans, times and places where bestiality was legal, etc.

Case-histories include confessions from both men and women who have practiced sex acts with animals. These include a man and his mare; a 14-year-old girl and her collie; a man and his cow; a sex orgy which included three young women and three Russian wolfhounds.

Other reports include a man's experience in Morocco in which he describes adventures of men, women and children with various animals (including an 8-year-old girl and a dog as well as a woman and a donkey); a lady snake charmer and her pet eel; a married couple who use a dog in their sexual activities and a teen-aged girl and her pony.

An added bonus is a reprinting of A. Niemoeller's Bestiality and the Law, a historical study of bestiality during the past thousand years. Illustrations from many historical sources are included. $3.00.

☐ Pornography

By David O. Cauldwell, M.D. Pornography, like all evil, seems to be in the eye of the beholder. No doubt someone will find evil in this book, probably because it is possible to present today, words and phrases as well as illustrations which would have been suppressed only a few years ago.

Dr. Cauldwell strips away all false notions and impressions regarding the subject and replaces them with facts and logic. Not a single word has been removed from the original printing which successfully withstood attacks by the Post Office to bar it from the mails.

Included in this publishing is a reprinting of an example of classical Japanese erotica — The Nightless City. This, too, is presented in completely unexpurgated form.

The drawings and photos incorporated indicate the varying concepts of pornography, both past and present. Also included are examples of erotic offerings from countries where pornography is legal. $3.00.

☐ Female Masturbation

A new printing of Dr. G. Lombard Kelly's monograph on this generally suppressed aspect of feminine sexuality, as well as studies by other prominent medical men.

Chapters are entitled: Female Masturbation by G. Lombard Kelly, M.D.; Auto-Erotism in the Female by Edwin Hirsch, M.D.; Artificial Erotism by J. Richardson Parke, M.D.; Childhood v. Adult Masturbation by Bernhard Bauer, M.D.; Masturbation in Girls by Albert Moll, M.D.; Curing Masturbation With Hypnosis by A. von Schrenck-Notzing, M.D.; Self-Masturbating Girls by Barbara Hoffman.

Subjects include: initial experiences, psychic effects, historical aspects, the use of artificial penes and other instruments, lesbian masturbation, normal and abnormal masturbation, techniques employed, frequency, causes and cures, evils of masturbation—real and imagined, masturbation as a sex crime deterrent, psychic auto-erotism, urethral masturbation, personal confessions, etc.

Fully illustrated with historical as well as contemporary drawings and photos of techniques, postures, masturbatory objects, etc. Price $3.00.

men—among them, cases of sperm count as low as 10,000,000—can achieve fertility under the proper circumstances.

■ GEORGE P— fell into this category. By the time his abnormally low sperm count was found to be responsible for his wife's inability to conceive, the P—s had already passed five childless married years. The doctor's first recommendations to George were regular doses of Vitamin E and B-complex pills, together with a high thyroid-extract diet, since both sperm agility and count are closely tied to general health. When this failed, George became one of 2000 men then testing the usefulness of a remarkable new drug, a synthetically produced male sex hormone called testosterone propionate.

Three times a week, the doctor injected George intramuscularly with 50 milligrams of the hormone, at a drugstore cost of $1.50. George felt absolutely no side effects. After six weeks of treatment, his sperm count had dromed, from an original testing of 15,000,000 to less than 5,000,000. By the end of the second month, tests revealed no living sperm cells at all.

Disaster? A medical catastrophe? Not at all. The principal involved is called the rebound phenomenon and, in George's case, worked like this: Treatment was stopped at the end of the second month and the P—s were advised to lead a normal life—(the drug has no effect on sexual appetite or ability). Once a month, George was to report to the doctor with a specimen. For three months, nothing happened. But on his fourth visit, George was elated to learn that his count was 35,000,000! By the next month, it had skyrocketed to 180,000,000—and Clara was pregnant!

Although there is no positive proof as yet, doctors who have worked with the new hormone speculate that its effect is roughly the same as collapsing the lung of a TB patient. In both cases, total rest seems to give the malfunctioning organ a chance to completely recover. In the case of the male sperm count, recovery takes the form of over-compensation, as witness George P—'s fantastic count of 180,000,000!

Sometimes, neither drugs nor timing will have any effect on a man's sperm count, and surgery provides the only answer. This may be necessary in those cases where the delicate passages are blocked. Disease or malformation may be responsible for such a handicap, but in most cases, a simple operation restores the patient to full vitality. This, too, may apply to men whose sperm producing glands have never descended from the abdominal cavity. In this position, and until they have dropped, they will produce no functional sperm.

Lately, an international preoccupation with H-bombs and radioactivity has caused considerable speculation that X-rays and other forms of radioactivity will render the male population sterile. This is a striking example of a little information being a dangerous thing. While it is perfectly true that an overdose of X-ray or other radioactivity will cause sterility by destroying the tissue of the gland which produces male sperm, it would take far more of an exposure than most of us face in a lifetime. There are cases of X-ray-induced sterility on record, but they are rare.

Receiving far less attention, yet infinitely more likely to render a couple childless is the kind of sterility that, in a sense, is related to impotence—and may actually result in impotence. Doctors and psychologists are now in agreement that there is a definite link between a man's capacity to enjoy sex and his ability to father children, no matter how badly his conscious mind tells him he wants them. The case of Ward G— bears this out in almost classic detail.

■ WARD WAS A happy-go-lucky young fellow when he got married, content to live and let live, and genuinely in love with his wife Louise. In a little over a year, all that had changed. Louise, a highly nervous and insecure girl, made Ward change jobs, criticized the way he dressed, the things he said, and seemed to constantly berate him over one thing or another. And the thing she nagged him about most of all, was the fact that she hadn't become pregnant yet. Louise wanted a baby more than anything else in the world. Time and again she would remind Ward that there was nothing wrong with her—the doctor had assured her of that.

"It's you!" she'd snarl. "You're no good for anything!"

Well, it doesn't take Dorothy Dix to figure out that love can't survive long in a house like that and, by the G—s first anniversary, Ward had had it. But Louise clung to him—he was going to give her a baby if it was the last thing he did.

Except, of course, that he didn't. Although the couple tried regularly, although Louise charted her temperature to discover her peak fertility days, although Ward himself was examined by the doctor, neither pregnancy nor any physical reason for sterility showed itself. It was toward the last, just before Ward finally walked out on Louise altogether, that he found himself unable to participate with her at all. Now he was not only sterile, but impotent, as well.

Ward poured out the whole sordid story to the social worker he went to see about advice for a divorce. "She didn't care about me," he kept muttering. "All I was to her was a baby-making machine. When I failed at that, I wasn't any more use to her than last night's garbage."

Instead of referring Ward to a lawyer, the social worker sent him to the local chapter of the Planned Parenthood League, an organization that has done remarkably fine work in cases of sterility. Ward repeated his story to the doctor there.

"And how did you feel about it?" the doctor asked. "Did you get any gratification?"

Ward shrugged hopelessly. "I felt like a bull or a stud horse or something. What kind of gratification can a guy get that way? Where's the love?"

Obviously there wasn't any, either for Ward or his wife. So obsessed had she become with the idea of having a baby, so critical and cold had she been to her husband, that he was psychologically incapable of fulfilling his role as a husband and father! Lacking the necessary stimulation that love between husband and wife is supposed to provide, Ward's reactions were automatic, forced, and totally lacking in the proper physical results that might have led to pregnancy.

These medical facts were carefully explained to Louise. Then the social worker undertook to show her how a bit of wifely affection, a warmth and genuine love for her husband might have changed the whole picture. Honestly sorry, not wanting to lose her husband—whom she really loved but, out of a peculiar mental block, hadn't been able to build up and strengthen—Louise agreed to her suggestions.

For a month, Ward and Louise didn't see each other. Then, early one evening they met for a quiet dinner in a restaurant. They chatted, went to a movie, held hands and came home to their apartment as though they'd never been away from it. That night, new worlds were opened to both of them. Forgetting their quarrels, forgetting the baby they both wanted so desperately, they discovered each other as individuals.

And nine months later, they had that baby! ●

HOUSE OF NAKED PAIN

first, let me tell you that I'm sorry this had to happen to you and we're going to try to find out who is responsible, but we can't do it without your help. Do you feel well enough to tell me about it this afternoon?"

"All right, Sergeant," The woman replied in a voice strong enough to encourage the detective's hope that he was finally going to get some real facts about her case.

"That's fine, Sonya. Now, look, I know it will be difficult for you to recall your ordeal, but honestly, Sonya, we need every scrap of detail you can remember. Anything could be important so I want you to try hard not to leave anything out. Understand?"

"Yes."

"Good, now I have a tape recorder in that case on the floor. I thought it would be less embarassing than talking to several people. I'll set it up over here and we'll get started."

When it was ready to go the detective showed the woman how to speak into the hand mike and played it back as a test. She seemed to speak clearly and intelligently. The Sergeant explained that he would ask her to talk without interuption about whatever had happened.

Still trying to put the woman at ease, the detective suggested a smoke break before they started. He gave her a cigaret, lighted it for her, refilled her water glass and asked if she was comfortable. Then, for a fleeting moment, the detective thought he had blown the chance to get her statement.

A cloud of angry defiance moved across the woman's face, she ground out the cigaret, raised up painfully on one elbow and leveled an accusing finger at the detective. He stood motionless and puzzled at her bedside. Then a torrent of words gushed from the woman, hitting the Sergeant like a cold shower.

"Comfortable?" the woman almost shouted, "I appreciate you're trying to be a gentleman, but you're treating me like a 16-year old schoolgirl who'd been raped for the first time. "Look, Sergeant, I'm a grown woman and I've been around a little but I got caught in a hell of a trick. I'm on your side. I want you to catch those dammed animals too!

"Here, pull back this sheet. It isn't going to be enough for you to hear my story—I want you to see what happened!"

As she ordered, the Sergeant pulled the sheet down to her ankles. She was naked and an involuntary 'God damn' slipped through the detective's lips as he stared at her body with the kind of shocked fascination that gathers people around accident victims.

"Now, Sergeant," the woman declared, "see those bandages on my breasts and legs? Well, those cover burns and bite marks and there's more on my stomach!

"There, take a look, Sergeant! They can't put a bandage where they burned and singed me there! And I can't even tell you how many times they raped me!"

The woman lowered her legs rolling clumsily and with obvious pain onto her side, then called to the detective:

"Now, take a look at those welts on my back and bottom and legs. That's where they whipped me, and there's burns back there, too. Pretty isn't it, Sergeant!"

The woman spit out the last words sarcastically, rolled over on her back again and lay spread-eagled before the almost speechless detective.

"Sonya," he started feebly, "it's a hell of a mess. All I can say is that I hope you get well soon and that we'll be able to get the bastards that did this to you!"

They sat and smoked in silence a few minutes. Then the detective made a few adjustments on the tape recorder and reminded her of the few preliminary questions he would ask. The woman nodded understanding and he began talking, handing over the mike to her for replies.

"What is your name?"

"Sonya Markley."

"Where do you live?"

"1627 Fulton Street, Apartment 5."

"How long have you lived there?"

"Almost four years."

That kind of routine questioning continued until all basic facts were on the record, then Sergeant Kindel spoke:

"Sonya, that takes care of the record questions. Now I want you to just tell me everything you can about what happened. I won't interupt you but may have a few questions when you are finished."

IT REALLY began about a month ago when I met this guy in the 77 Bar on Fulton Street near my apartment and where I used to drop in for a drink sometimes after work. He said his name was Al, and I never did know his last name. I saw him there several times and he always bought me a drink or two. He asked me for a date a couple of times but I didn't go out with him.

I know I'm fat and Al probably heard around the bar that I lived alone in an apartment, so there would be only one reason he'd want a date and I didn't go for him like that.

(The detective whispered a question.)

Oh, Al is about 40 and tall and slim. He always wore good clothes and seemed to have money. He never told me where he worked, but maybe somebody around the 77

Bar would know more about him. I'm afraid that's all I know.

Anyway, one night he told me a friend of his was having a party where there would be a few drinks and some movies. Al asked me to go with him. I refused at first but he kept talking about it for several days and finally I told him I'd go. He told me his friend lived out in the country and that we'd meet some nice people.

I had met Al at the bar that night. We had a couple of drinks and started out in his car.

(Another signal from the detective.)

No, I don't know what kind of car it was. It was big maybe like a Buick or something and he drove fast. I didn't pay too much attention to where we were going because he kept talking all the time, but we drove for a long time.

I know we were on a dark country road and remember he turned into a narrow dirt road that was rough. I was a little scared then but he told me it was the private drive of his friend. We pulled into sort of a yard and there were several cars parked around. Al said the party was going to be in a barn they had fixed up and as we walked toward it, I mentioned that I didn't see any lights. Al said they were probably running some of the movies.

When we reached a small door of the barn Al knocked and a man opened it, motioning us into a small room. It was too dark to see very well as the man opened another door into a large room where a shaft of light from the projector cut through the darkness.

The place smelled like a barn and I remembered Al saying his friend had fixed it up. There was something strange about the place that I didn't like. Al led me to a bench near the back of the room, not too close to the others and where we could see the picture. I watched awhile and it was a filthy movie showing a naked young girl being raped by four men. It made me shudder and I wanted to leave right then.

I was looking over the heads that showed in the light from the projector and couldn't see any women. There must have been about twenty or more people there. I started to ask Al about it just as two big floodlights came on. I was blinded for a moment. Then I looked at the crowd of all men. I was scared and told Al that I wanted to leave.

There was some guy up in front standing on some sort of platform. He was talking but I wasn't paying much attention until all the men turned around and looked at me. They clapped and cheered but I still didn't know what it was all about.

I stood up and told Al to take me home but he didn't answer. Then I heard this guy on the platform say something about a dancer and 'the little fat lady who came to entertain us.' I started toward the door where we had come in and then two big guys each grabbed me by my arms. I kicked and screamed as they dragged me up on that platform. They held me up there and the men were yelling.

I kept trying to break free but those two guys holding me by my arms forced me to stand. The guy who had been talking told the men that Al had brought me there to entertain them. I knew that moment that I had been tricked, and I never saw Al again.

Then while these two held me the other guy stepped in front of me and pulled my skirt and slip up to my waist. He held it up like that as I screamed and tried to kick, and I heard him say something about wanting to see whether I had my dancing costume on under my regular clothes. The movie had worked the men into a frenzy and they kept yelling 'take 'em off!'

I was helpless as this guy in charge unhooked my skirt and pushed it to the floor. The other two were still holding me up by my arms. My blouse was unbuttoned down the front and the straps of my slip were broken and it fell to the floor. I was crying and screaming and the men were leering at me like wild animals as I stood before them on that platform in just my girdle, stockings and bra.

This guy kept making dirty cracks about me being so fat, like 'there's 'there's enough here for all of us.' He put his hand on a clump of fat on my legs just below my girdle and told the men to look at the way it covered up 'more interesting places.' I screamed as he touched me and pinched me.

Then he unhooked my bra and ripped the straps. The men howled when those two holding me forced me to bend down forward and the other guy slapped me. They jerked me up straight again and my stockings and girdle were yanked off as I shrieked hysterically for them to let me go. My answer was to be held up in front of those men stark naked, and screaming as this guy pinched and rubbed his hands over my body.

They turned me around with my back to the men and forced me to bend down until my head almost touched the floor. Then this guy told the men to look at the size of my big bottom. I jumped and screamed when he pinched me while I was bent over. The men kept yelling to let me go as they turned me around to face them again.

This guy who had stripped me and molested me then told the men he was going to let them have me, but that first I had to do a dance for them. Someone in the crowd shouted the hell with the dance. And suddenly those two who had been holding me all that time let go of my arms and shoved me forward almost to the edge of the platform.

For a horrible moment all I could see was a wave of lust crazed men swarming toward me. Their yelling mixed with my screams as I was knocked down on the rough planks of that platform.

It seemed like a million hands were trying to claw the flesh from every inch of my body as I lay there writhing and screaming. I was continously raped, slapped, pinched and burned with cigarets while sprawled naked and helpless in the middle of a ring of sex-crazed men. I screamed frantically for mercy but my pleas were answered with more torture.

They mauled me around like a rag doll, stretching my legs and arms in all directions, dragging me across that rough platform and rolling me over from my back to my stomach and back again. At one time I was forced to crawl on my hands and knees among that maze of clutching hands.

I don't know just when I lost consciousness, but I do remember screaming as stinging lashes cut into my back and legs. My nightmares will be filled with visions of men's hands and heads as they bent down over me to bite and torture.

It must have been about daybreak when I came to screaming hysterically and still lying naked on that platform. Somehow I got out of there and dimly remember someone helping me, but I guess I blacked out and that's all I can remember until I came to my senses here in the hospital.

have him. I made arrangements to run into him several times more in the next few weeks.

"I actually felt as if I were seducing him, though now I'm not so sure about that. But at any rate, I managed to let him know I was available, if he wanted me. Before Christmas we were lovers. He was magnificent. He was so strong and practically insatiable. I think we went wild together. It wasn't long before my game was finished. I was deeply, madly, hopelessly in love with him.

"He seemed to read my mind. He was aware of my total devotion even before I was. Then one day, the entire thing changed. I came to his apartment. There were two other women there. He had sex relations with all of us, then insisted that the girls pair off and amuse him. He watched and laughed and kept giving us new and perverted ideas to perform. We all did as he told us.

"During the next week or so, he kept varying his demands. I was put through every form of sexual degeneracy known to humanity. Yet I knew that if I refused anything, he'd get rid of me. I was willing to bear anything, just to be with him. I was beaten; I was tortured; I was forced to have relations with other men. I became a participant in wild orgies, where men, women and even young children cavorted around, in a series of haphazard pairings that make me sick when I think of them.

"Then suddenly the big demand came. He had a job for me to do. Once it was finished, he promised, he'd set me up in a villa in Bavaria, and keep me as his mistress and lover for the rest of my life. Just this one small job. There was no one else who could do it. He said it wasn't so much for Germany as for him. Himmler was trying to overthrow him. If he failed, who knows what might happen. He shuddered. I didn't need anyone to draw me a picture. I knew what would happen if Himmler could convice Hitler that his usefulness was over. There was no room for failure in the Nazi high command.

"I agreed. He told me what had to be done. I became the mistress of a Prussian count who was involved in a plot against the Nazis. The count was horrible. He was fat, sloppy, and brutal. But I bore through it all. I allowed the count to make whatever use of me he wanted. And every week I managed to send reports of what the count was doing on to Canaris.

EVIDENTLY THE COUNT trusted me completely. He asked me to become a courier for his anti-party group. I told Canaris. He was delighted. I began to make regular trips to Switzerland. Each time, during the trip, the papers would be taken away from me for a few hours and photographed by Abwehr agents.

"On the last trip, the Abwehr man was delighted. One of the papers I carried was a list of 70 names, all those involved in the plot. Other papers too were highly incriminating. I was told that I would be arrested at the border and the papers confiscated. I was not to worry. Canaris takes care of his own, they told me.

"I was arrested, all right. But I never heard from Canaris again. Or anyone else in the Abwehr. I had no hearing, no trial. I was sent straight off to Buchenwald. Within 24 hours of my arrest I was in the concentration camp. I couldn't even tell my story. No one would listen.

"I suppose I was sentenced to death. I know I was in a death barracks. But by some mixup, I was spared hanging. I stayed in the camp till the war ended. I don't have to tell you what I went through. But I survived. I thank God for that."

The affair of Anna M is only too typical of his operations. No one around him was exempt from his demands. There are dozens upon dozens of similar stories. As a result, even the official records that implicate his aide, Col. Oster in treason against the Third Reich must be considered suspect. It's not impossible, not even improbable, that Oster was merely penetrating a subversive group at Canaris' own orders; that Oster was sacrificed just to attempt to protect Canaris himself.

Canaris always claimed that he wanted nothing to do with general policy of torture and murder that were a Nazi way of life. But within his own field, he seemed to have forgotten that. When it came to the "interrogation" of suspected enemy agents, he was like a fiend. The foulest SS torture chamber was like heaven in comparison to his "questioning room".

One spy who was located, Constantine K——, described it in detail. Mr. K——, a Greek in the employ of British M5 was caught observing German troop emplacements at a time when it was thought that the European invasion would come through the Balkans. K was rushed to Berlin and was personally questioned by Canaris.

"It began politely enough. Canaris tried to impress on me that I was lucky to be his prisoner rather than a slave to the SS. He said that the SS had wanted to execute me on the spot, but that the Abwehr had interceded for me. He said that while he realized that it was my duty to give out any vast amount of information, he hoped I would at least give him some small scrap of intelligence to justify his actions. It needn't be very much, he laughed, but just a trifle.

"I told him I was no traitor. He smiled and said he understood but suggested I think over his offer for a few days. I was returned to prison and was well treated. No one talked to me again for more than a week.

"The next time I was brought in for questioning, Canaris asked me if I was ready now to cooperate. I told him I had not changed my mind, that I was no traitor. He shrugged and again said he understood but that his earlier statements were still true. He would not mistreat me. He turned as if to leave the room. Then as he reached the door he hesitated a moment. "Perhaps you'd be interested in seeing something. It's only next door."

"I knew I had no choice in the matter. I was led to an adjoining room. I almost fainted at what I saw. My wife and four of my five children were there. They were nude, tied to rings attached to the ceiling, just dangling at the end of their stretched arms. Canaris laughed. He told me that while he wasn't going to torture me, he had made no promises about my family.

"I was tied to a chair. An Abwehr agent held my head so I couldn't turn it away. And while I watched, they started on my youngest son, a boy hardly more than five years old. There was no subtlety to it. It was brutal and direct. An Abwehr man grabbed the boys leg and twisted it till I heard the bone snap. The child screamed with agony. The torturer kept twisting. There was a spurt of blood as the jagged ends of the bone tore through flesh and skin. I fainted.

"When I came to, perhaps five minutes had passed. The boy was now unconscious. The Abwehr man took out his dagger and sliced through flesh and muscle till the leg came off. Then picking it up, they brought it over to me, smeared my face with the blood and laid the leg in my lap.

"My wife was screaming. The other youngsters were whimpering, "Daddy, Daddy, help us. Don't let us die."

"What could I do? What would you have done. The world was a million miles away. My wife and children were right there in the room. I talked. I told them everything I knew. I sold out my friends, my associates, everything I believed in. Any question they asked me, I answered. It wasn't very much. They must have known that. I was too low in the organization to have any real information. Yet I suppose the very names of my associates made it worth while. If they could get as much knowledge from the others, sooner or later they'd get to the heart of our resistance network.

I WAS PUT into a cell in the cellar of the Abwehr building. I stayed there I don't know how long. I didn't see my wife and children. They told me that they were in prison too but were still alive and that they were not being tortured.

"In 1945 The SS came and I was sent to a death camp. But the war ended shortly after. I found my wife and one child. They had survived. There was no trace of the others. After my treason, I couldn't face Greece again. We migrated to another country. Please don't say where we are today. Perhaps we can still find peace of mind."

As the war went on, with its succession of Allied victories, Canaris' position grew shakier. Hitler was looking for any excuses he could find and the seeming failure of the professional intelligence services were as good as any. To make matters worse, there was always Himmler standing over his shoulder.

Frankly, Himmler resented the Abwehr. Operating his own secret police, his own spy network, he wanted more than anything else, to completely control all sources of information in his own SS. He had been trying to take over for years. In addition. Hitler had never fully trusted the OKW (Ober Kommand Wehrmacht). Canaris, Nazi though he was, still belonged to the old military group. He was not a politician. He had been regular navy long before Hitler's party had been heard of.

Himmler's chance finally came. With defeat, absolute and total staring them in the face, the regular military leaders prepared to dump the Nazis as they had gotten rid of the Kaiser when he no longer served their purpose, and had destroyed the Weimar republic when it failed to develop Germany's military might.

It was a matter of cold logic and these were cold, logical men.

How many of them actually took part in the bomb plot cannot be said with certainty. Not too many. But the bulk of the regular high command were aware of what was going on. Canaris definitely knew. Not only were his own assistants involved, but letters addressed to him contained a vast amount of information relative to the plot. He had not reported it.

The arrest of Col. Oster marked the end of the Abwehr. Canaris was kicked out, given a token assignment and Himmler took over.

Within days it was finished. Himmler's men found enough in the Abwehr files to demolish Canaris reputation. Papers, photostats and confessions of some of the plotters was presented to Hitler.

Canaris was arrested by the Gestapo. He was given a secret trial and was condemned to death. But for the time being, the record seemed to end right there. Gestapo files contain no information whatsoever as to the final disposition of the old Admiral. It was as if he disappeared into the void.

It was only after the war was over and a full investigation had been made that some witnesses were found who had seen the final chapter. Canaris had indeed been executed. He had been stripped of all rank and had been summarily hanged. Sworn testimony told of seeing the execution and of viewing the corpse after it had been finally cut down.

So Canaris is dead. There is no question that he deserved death. If Hitler hadn't killed him, he would unquestionably have taken his place in Nuremburg to have stood trial as a war criminal. Before the witnesses to his execution were found, a search had actually been made for him for that very purpose.

As an intelligent agent, as a master spy, he was one of the world's greatest. But as a man without principles, without mercy, with a heart of stone and the desires of a fiend, we are all better off without him. He's dead. All we can say now is, "Good Riddance!" •

TREASURE OF BAGDAD

the place, big rubies, sapphires, emeralds and diamonds—diamonds as big as a fist, just lying there, rolling about, teasing us with their elusive brilliance.

How many we lost in the sand I don't know. Probably a fortune. Another million dollars worth might be lying around loose, today, waiting for someone to come upon them and pick them up.

But we didn't have time for a mere million. There was too much more, still boxed, still waiting to be collected.

We worked witn shovels now, sifting the sand slowly, coming on the corpses of man and animal, and picking up our reward box by box, saddle bag by saddle bag, stone by stone as we found it.

Slowly but surely we filled our trunk. And there was still treasure left over to pour into the rear seats.

We couldn't take nearly all of it. The temptation was there, certainly, but with all that wealth, our lives counted now. Too much weight even on those oversize tires could bog us down. And with no one around to pull us free again, we'd stay where we were until we rotted.

Regretfully we shoveled enough sand over our treasure site to hide it from someone coming on it accidentally. We knew that the ever present desert winds would pile back the sand to a smoothness in a matter of weeks. Some day, perhaps, we'd come back for the rest. For the present, we had all we could carry.

The trip to Mosul was slow and hard. But once we crossed the Euphrates, and found civilization again, we were able to move with some degree of reasonable assurance. And then, finally, we came to the great oil city. It took more time and inquiries to find the merchant we were searching for. He welcomed us, as you can well imagine, with open arms. We found a new sanctuary and hiding place in his luxurious home.

Our host had heard from my friend in Karballa. He was prepared and quite evidently knew exactly what to do. He unloaded the treasure with care, inventorying every wonderful stone, counting every precious coin.

Then came the long, slow job of disposing of the treasure.

All in all it's been two years now. About two thirds of our treasure has been sold. So far it's brought in over $42,000,000; that's fourteen million for each of the three shares.

Ours is safely deposited in Switzerland. And it's growing, month by month as new deposits are made by our correspondent in Mosul.

Karen and I are married now. She didn't even have to divorce Eric. He obliged by divorcing her.

I'm done with adventuring. I'm a good, solid citizen now, a resident of—but why bring that up.

But one thing I have learned. You've got to be lucky in this world. Sure, you can work hard and be happy, you can get by; or you can try the other road and end up either running your life away or serving as a guest of the state, behind bars.

With luck however, it's a different story. That's what really pays off. And I've had my share of luck. It's all I want. To try for more would just be tempting providence. Because next time my luck might run out. And who needs that?

Right now, I've got just about everything. ●

CREEPING HORD

hanging branch. Skinning my hands against the jagged bark, I pulled with all my weight and broke the limb free. "I'm coming baby!" I yelled down to Lise. "Try to hold 'em off—I'm coming!"

Like a lean rat, the lemming charged up my leg. I grabbed it just as its head darted under my shorts. With fiery teeth, it bit a chunk of flesh out of my thigh—I managed to hold on to it with one hand and bludgeon it to death with the club.

I RUSHED DOWN the steep path, my feet cracking and bleeding as they pounded against the sharp stones. Gulping for air, I reached the ledge. There was Lise! I turned toward her and gasped. She stood inches from the edge of a 500-foot precipice—swaying as if hypnotized. The horde of lemming was advancing on her! From the depths of her throat came a voice I did not recognize—a cry of sheer animal terror!

"Arne—their teeth! They're trying to make me go over! Help me!"

Her face was drained of blood—her hair fell wild on her shoulders as she tried to shake them off. There were long red gashes on her thighs and hips where they'd ripped her flesh. Her back was covered with deep claw marks—like the lashings of a devilish whip.

Suddenly a lemming leaped up her calf and ran beneath her arm to sink its teeth in her breast. She beat it off, and as it fell to earth it carried in its teeth a limp strip of bloody flesh! A half-dozen lemming bit at her feet, leaving bare bone exposed at her ankles. She stared at them in horror—she stepped further back toward the cliff edge . . .

"For God's sake, don't jump!" I shouted. I dove into the squeaking mass, flailing with the club, trying to reach her.

Thirty feet away, the most beautiful girl I'd ever known was considering suicide rather than be eaten alive. Her face was drawn tight with pain, her eyes glazed with insane fear. As I slowly made headway through the sea of furry monsters, they seemed to be organizing for an attack. A few of the bolder ones broke toward me—then more and more! Then I was the one they were after!

It had started out as a beautiful June weekend. We'd driven south from Oslo the day before for some sunbathing. Throughout the long winter, Oslo is damp, dark and miserable. Once summer does come, you gobble up the sunshine like a glutton denied food too long. Lise was nineteen—a vivacious, rosy-cheeked sports lover who wore her clothes skin-tight. When you were near Lise in a sweater you forgot all pain. Lise in a Bikini had the effect of a fifth of bourbon. Her long legs, high breasts and light coloring made her seem more like a glorious marble statue than a living, breathing girl. Just so you don't get the wrong idea—there, amidst the majestic Norwegian setting of mountain and sea, *I'd planned to ask her to be my wife.

TWO YEARS BEFORE, I'd left my home in New York for the riotous Paris I remembered from World War II. Things, I found, had changed. An ex-GI Joe wasn't as welcome as I'd expected—the postwar influx of crude, rich American tourists had soured the once-friendly Parisians on any- thing Yankee.

A job that I'd been promised died on the vine, and what with working permits and cartes d'identite and every other obstacle the French government could think of to prevent a foreigner from earning a living, I soon found my bankroll had nosedived down to zero. I was drifting from hand to mouth as a guide for spoiled schoolgirls from the States.

I'd almost decided to move on to LeHavre and try to work my way back across the Atlantic on a tramp tub when, from out of the blue, an old uncle I'd hardly known existed, came through with a job.

My folks had migrated from Oslo to the Bay Ridge section of Brooklyn, a couple of years before I was born. Uncle Nels stayed behind in the old country. After the war, they helped carry him while he was getting back on his feet with a trucking business. I'd picked up some Norwegian as a kid—Uncle Nels was only too glad to give me a job to pay back my parents' kindness.

This might have made everything rosy. But I told him I wasn't taking any favors I didn't deserve. To learn the business from the ground up, I drove a truck for about a year. Then I moved into the front office, and there I met Lise.

We worked side by side for about four months—that is, I worked when I could get Lise off my brain long enough to think about business. We hit it right off in an arrangement that was agreeable but didn't tie anybody down.

After a while, it hit me like a bolt of lightning. I was crazy in love with Lise! I was really looking forward to that summer weekend. I bought a small engagement ring. For days I practiced, hoping to delight her by proposing in flawless Norwegian—without a Brooklyn accent. I planned that after we'd married, I'd take her back to the States and start a small trucking business of my own.

For the perfect romantic setting, I decided on a spot on the Christiania Fjord. I wanted broad snow-capped mountains—I wanted glistening blue water. I wanted a soft breeze and bright golden sunshine.

I also got something I didn't want.

I never had heard much about the lemming, Scandinavian rodents that from time to time go on crazy death marches to the sea. The theory is that the vicious little rats multiply so rapidly that they commit mass suicide to decrease their numbers. Usually they don't bother people in cities, but during a march they regard out-of-the-way country places as their exclusive territory. In a frenzy they chew up everything standing in their way—trees, and crops. Plus Lise and me . . .

THIRTY FEET FROM Lise, I tripped and fell into the middle of a slithering, razor-toothed carpet. A king-sized lemming, maybe twenty inches long, bored up my cheek and pulled away the lobe of my left ear. I howled in pain—in a burst of hatred, I dragged myself to my feet and began to smash at them with furious sweeps of the tree branch. I bashed at them like a madman—layer upon layer of pulpy bodies formed a bloody cake on the swinging end.

When my back was turned, a small yellow horror dropped from an overhanging rock, crawled over my scalp and dug a flint-sharp claw into my eye.

In one unthinking moment I opened my mouth to emit a shriek of agony. The demon darted between my lips and bit off the tip of my tongue! Cursing incoherently, my mouth filling with blood, I continued to lash my way toward Lise.

"Don't jump!" I tried to yell, but all I could do was gargle and spit blood.

Lise snapped out of her trance and began to kick her torn feet towards where I was fighting the saber-fanged monsters. "Rocks!" I yelled. But I knew she couldn't understand me. "Use rocks!" I picked up a heavy stone and smashed at a cluster of lemming, squashing them so their insides oozed through their bodies.

"Kill them, Arne!" she screeched. Her voice was not human! "Squash them! Beat them!" Higher and higher, her voice rose—the words poured out. "Kill them! Kill them! Kill them!"

"Run to the car!" Pointing down the path, I grunted words my slashed tongue could not pronounce. "You can make it!"

"No," she sobbed, her eyes blazing. "I'll stay with you and kill them!" Her maniacal laugh turned my backbone to quivering jelly.

I stared at her.

"We'll kill them, Arne! Kill them, kill them, kill them—!"

With sick, sudden, knife-like certainty I knew the girl I loved had been driven hopelessly insane!

IN AN INSTANT I was covered with lemming. They weighed no more than a few ounces apiece, but they piled into me with the force of howitzer shells. They fought among themselves to sink their incisors into me, the larger ones trampling over the smaller to climb higher on my body. Paralyzing pain racked my frame as the fiends on the ground nibbled on my toes. I tumbled over, unable to keep my balance. Within seconds my shorts were gnawed off!

My club! Where was it? Then I stumbled, trying to right myself—I saw the club being reduced to a heap of dust by a dozen living buzzsaws. Convulsively, I pulled lemming off my face and arms, searching desperately for something to battle them with. A pile of flat rocks stood to one side of me. I raised slab after slab above my head and crushed them down on my attackers.

"Kill them, Arne! Kill them!" Lise screamed. She had found a dead branch somewhere on the ledge. With crazy fury she whipped at the lemming that clung to my sides and back. "Help me kill them, Arne!" she shrieked.

One filthy black lemming dug deep into my throat—near my windpipe. I twisted hard with both hands and tore its head from its body. For a moment the lemming retreated. We should have tried to make good our escape then, but Lise pursued them madly, shouting: "Kill them! Kill them!" I rushed toward her to pull her away, but I was too late.

In a lightning panzer spurt, a dozen lemming charged at her, tearing through her breasts and abdomen. She screamed and feebly grabbed at one. The furry demon snapped once and shredded away the little finger of her right hand. Bare muscle glinted through a cavern ripped into her stomach.

With a groan, Lise fell forward against my side, the blood that poured from her body mixing with that streaming from mine. I managed to hold onto her though a lemming had gnawed through my upper arm. A mouse-sized streak of hell dashed up her back and bit the side of my neck, tearing toward the vital artery.

"Lise!" I coughed.

She looked up, only dimly conscious. With large masses of flesh ripped away, her face was barely a skeleton. In a superhuman effort she raised what was left of her hands and grasped them around the beast. With a final explosion of energy, ignoring her own agony, my poor, dear, mad Lise crushed my would-be murderer into a bloody, hairy sponge. Then, as she lay against me, she started to giggle—softly, insanely, to herself.

SHE WAS STILL giggling as I dragged her up the path, groping my way over jagged rocks until I found the car. A brigade of lemming followed us, voraciously grabbing mouthfuls of our flesh as we fled. I beat them off with a tire iron and shut the door of the car. Inside the tiny coupe, Lise stopped giggling. She died.

She had lost too much blood and too much flesh to remain alive. The naked strips on the seat were all that were left of the most beautiful body I'd ever seen or loved. Great oozing holes were ripped into her marble-textured back—her stomach was a gaping cavern. She had no face!

I lost my right eye, both my ears, and most of my chin. Two of my fingers had been slashed off, and all of my toes. I could make out the bare bones of both my legs. We had been attacked by creatures of the devil.

When some passing fishermen found us, they could not understand my garbled, tongueless ranting. I was begging Lise to forgive me for not having allowed her to jump. ● any man's finding in an encounter with a nymphomaniac the fulfillment of more than a fraction of the full-blown fantasies he has entertained about her. The reason is, simply, that the true nymphomaniac is mentally ill, and frequently unstable. Her sexual availability is really only a symptom of this illness, whose complex and usually deeply hidden causes may have other and much less attractive effects.

Any man, for his own sake and hers, should know about these dangers before he gets involved with such a woman.

The standard dictionary definition of nymphomania is "excessive sexual appetite in the female." But this tells only half the story. It is quite possible for a woman to have extremely strong sexual appetites and not be a nymphomaniac, so long as she is capable of having these appetites satisfied by her partner—and especially if the relationship is a genuine and lasting one. It is also possible for a woman to drift from affair to affair over a period of years without being a nymphomaniac, so long as each affair is satisfying. What distinguishes the true nymphomaniac is that she combines excessive sexual appetite with constant, compulsive promiscuity—she cannot help herself. Her contacts are almost always totally devoid of any trace of love or affection. Unfulfilled in all of her experiences, she is engaged in a constant search for satisfaction that constantly eludes her.

Take, for example, a girl we will call Lucille, a tall, blonde beauty who was brought to me for treatment by her parents after she was expelled from college for extending the principle of coeducation to the bedroom on an assembly line basis.

When she came to my office, Lucille seemed to have no regrets at all, and in fact to be somewhat proud of her performance.

"I like kicks, and the more the better."

Her first erotic experience with a boy came, in fact, before she reached puberty. At the summer colony where her well-to-do parents had a cottage, she was one of a group of pre-pubescent boys and girls whose curiosity about each other took the form of a "strip-down club." In the the form of a "strip-down club."

One day, when the game had palled from constant repetition, a boy who was both mentally and physically more precocious than the rest offered to do "a stunt none of us have ever seen before." He selected Lucille to "help" him, and proceeded to engage in mock intercourse with her.

"Of course we didn't really," said Lucille. "But I never forgot it."

The premature sex club eventually broke up, and the typical teenage round of dating and "going steady" began. Lucille continued to encourage the boys to pet and explore her. She was undisputed as the "hottest number" in the gang which attracted the older youths in the community. In the summer when she was thirteen, a sixteen year-old introduced her to actual intercourse.

"It was after a dance at the yacht club," she recalled. "We had been friendly all summer, talking at the beach and things like that. When he asked me to go to the dance, my parents were a little doubtful, but they knew his parents and so they said okay. After the dance we walked home, and on the beach we found this rowboat. He took me out onto the lake and we did it there on the water, under the stars. I felt all the thrills I had before, and I was only sorry when he had to stop."

The boy boasted of his conquest, and soon Lucille was enjoying and being enjoyed by most of the boys in the older group. Opportunities for sex were more limited in the city, but she was soon known to most of the boys as a "pushover," and was exceedingly popular.

"Of course it backfired," she said. "Some parents got wind of what was going on, and my folks packed me off to boarding school. I was mad but I didn't fight it." Sex became a summer pastime for Lucille, and one in which she engaged heavily. It was not until she was ready to enter college that she began to feel that the pleasure she experienced from sex was not enough. In talking with other girls, she became aware that she was not achieving orgasm and she redoubled her activity in hopes of finding a boy who could cause her to achieve climax and experience fulfillment.

"I don't know how many times I almost got there," she said. "I would just tighten up a little and then relax. It was nice, but I knew there was more. I always felt that I could just start right in again, but it wasn't often that the boy could." When she came to my office Lucille was still sure that if she could find a man who could "keep going" long enough, she would achieve orgasm. But by the time she was discovered in the fraternity house, she never had. In frantic abandon, she had agreed to "take on" the whole chapter in hopes that where a single man could not satisfy her, a number could. By then her campus reputation was so well established that boys who solicited her favors were openly scornful of her morals. Shame and guilt added a what-the-hell feeling to her additude. "I decided, 'why fight it?'" she said. "And I didn't."

Lucille's case illustrates several important points about nymphomania. One of these is that it is likely to become established as a pattern early in the sexual life, and is more common among girls who experience erotic sensations before most of their contemporaries. Their bodies are able to give them pleasure long before their emotions have developed sufficient maturity to embrace the full implications of the sex act.

Her contention that the "right man" could surely give her fulfillment was a false hope so long as she retained her infantile conception.

FIGHT BIRTH DEFECTS
Give* MARCH OF DIMES

A similar attitude is shared by nymphomaniacs who contend that the "right man" is the one who can give them the "real love" that they require. The unconscious hypocrisy and self-deception of their argument is proven by the fact that, in their search for "true love" such women give themselves casually and indiscriminately to any man who is willing.

Such absence of emotional involvement might seem to recommend the nymphomaniac as an ideal partner for someone who wants no entanglements in the game of bed-hopping. But it has one severe drawback: the man who finds a nymphomaniac for a playmate is not likely to keep her long. He may find himself rudely and derisively discarded even after a single night, and even if he is not, his consistent inability to satisfy the woman can hardly do less than make him doubt his own ability.

An infantile emotional understanding of the meaning of sex is only one of several major causes of nymphomanis, and a basic frigidity, while the most common motivating factor is not the only one. Some women who are nymphomaniacs achieve orgasm regularly, yet are driven on to seek experience after experience.

Among other types of nymphomania are the following: The latent lesbian is a woman who is fleeing from an unconscious attraction to the members of her own sex, and must constantly repeat the sex act in order to prove to herself and the world that she is a woman. In extreme cases, the woman may be harrassed by extreme nervousness and anxiety unless she is able to perform the sex act several times a day. Since a major component of lesbianism is hostility toward the male, and this operates unconsciously in the latent lesbian, no single man can ever be the wholly satisfactory lover. In the unconscious he is a substitute for a female lover, a role that he can never completely fulfill.

A particularly tragic example of this is seen in the case of Marianne, who came to me for consultation because she feared the breakup of her marriage. An extremely pretty but tiny and feminine girl, Marianne was a secretary in the office of an advertising firm who married, after a long courtship, an illustrator who worked in the same office. A shy and retiring girl, the daughter of a small-town lawyer, Marianne came to sexual experience comparatively late. During high school and secretarial school she had preferred quiet pasttimes and avoided most social activities of her contemporaries.

She seldom had dates, and then most often with the completely reliable sons of her father's friends. It was not until she came to work in the city that she met a man who courted her with great persistence and ultimately seduced her. The man had no real interest in her, and quickly dropped the affair. Despite the shock, Marianne found that she wanted to repeat the experience. Her sense of propriety caused her to seek her companions away from the office—in fact, among truckers who frequented bars in a large terminal warehouse area across town. Her explanation was that despite her delicate appearance, only large and extremely

Doctor develops home treatment to Stop dandruff and check thinning hair

A leading New York physician, working with a team of hair and scalp specialists, has developed a simple, medicated home treatment plan, that may mean the difference between saving your hair or losing it to eventual baldness!

This important advance in hair and scalp care meets the very serious needs of so many people troubled by thinning hair, dandruff, itchy scalp, dull dry hair, and minor scalp irritations.

Loss of Hair Through Neglect

Many people lose hair, even become bald unnecessarily through neglect and mistreatment. Yet Nature gives you fair warning. Two such warnings are itching scalp and excess dandruff. These signs, as well as subsequent loss of hair, appear to be more common among men.

What most people fail to realize is that the scalp is skin and needs the same careful cleansing, nourishing and stimulation we give skin on the rest of our body, if you are a man or woman!

The healthy condition of the hair therefore, is mainly dependent on the condition of the scalp and proper stimulation of sebaceous glands and muscles.

FOR THE FIRST TIME A 4-WAY HOME TREATMENT

STEP 1. The treatment begins with the use of a specially designed Scalp Stimulator. With its hundreds of magic "fingers," it is scientifically designed to loosen dry, flaky dandruff and bring fresh revitalizing blood closer to the surface to stimulate and nourish hungry hair follicles. You'll delight in the tingling and exhilarating feeling of your scalp after each massage.

STEP 2. Is a unique Medicated Mint Shampoo. It contains a combination of natural and essential oils in a mild coconut oil base. This shampoo not only cleans away surface dirt, but more important, reaches down deep and loosens pore impurities embedded in the scalp. A shampoo once a week keeps hair and scalp thoroughly clean.

STEP 3. The third step in this treatment is an application of Balsam Peru Lotion. It is a hair-conditioning emulsion of rich herbal extracts in a natural lanolin and vegetable oil base. Apply after shampoo to feed, lubricate and moisturize hair and scalp.

STEP 4. Is the application of an anti-dandruff sulphur ointment, a highly effective tissue healing salve that you massage into your scalp. Its antiseptic action goes to work immediately, positively checking itchy dandruff, healing minor scalp irritations and imparting new body and lustre to the hair.

Nothing Else Like It

So positive have been the benefits of this treatment, that it is easy to understand why scalp specialists feel these products are the most important hair and scalp treatment items ever developed.

Now Available to the Public for the First Time

This medically developed and tested treatment is called TOP-CHECK. It is now available to the public in limited quantities and at moderate cost. You can get the wonderful benefits of TOP-CHECK for less than 20¢ a treatment. An amazing bargain when you consider what it will do for your hair and scalp.

masculine men attracted her. The sole exception was her present husband, a slender, blond man who never went beyond the most preliminary petting during their courtship, and displayed no great sexual drive in their marital relations. All during the courtship, Marianne had continued to seek satisfaction from her trucker friends. Now, however, she wanted to be faithful to her husband, but found herself constantly wishing to resume her old ways, and fearful of her husband's discovery.

"I love him," she said many times. "But even when he makes love to me I am unsatisfied, and I cannot feel calm unless I have another man soon after." As we worked to bring some of the conflicts in Marianne's mind into the open, her husband discovered her unfaithfulness, and found this sufficient cause to commit suicide. Her guilt and frustration redoubled, Marianne became an alcoholic and when last heard from was spending most of her time in the truckmen's bars, offering herself to any man who would take her.

A variant of the compensating nymphomaniac may be the housewife who is exacting a form of revenge upon a husband she subconsciously hates by having sex with all comers. Such a woman is typically the kind who welcomes salesmen with a zeal that makes them forget their mission; who requires of meter-readers services that were never contemplated in the utility-company tariffs. Such a woman may feel great guilt for her actions, yet be unable to control them. Frequently, this guilt creates an urge to make a clean breast of it all to the husband—a warped expression of her true desire to wound.

The narcissistic nymphomaniac is a girl who is so in love with herself that she gets satisfaction from her lover's excitement because it is evidence that she is as beautiful as she thinks she is. Since it is herself that she is focused on, the man is little better than an elaborate device for masturbation. The need for constant justification of her self-love drives the narcissistic nymphomaniac on to new men.

In the foregoing, we have been concerned mainly with nymphomania which stems from deep-seated psychological conflicts which find means of resolution in constant sexual activity with different men. It is important to keep in mind that even when a woman is able to assuage her fear, or guilt, or uncertainty through nymphomaniac behavior, she is not likely to be free from anguish. She may be constantly making good resolutions about controlling her urges; she may be so crushed by the social stigma of her behavior that she cannot stand it. Alcoholism, suicide and other forms of self-destructive behavior are not uncommon among nymphomaniacs beset by such problems, and where a component of the underlying causes is hostility toward the male, it is not unlikely that the woman will involve her lover in the consequences.

In addition to these neurotic nymphomaniacs, there are several other types whose behavior is similar, though it may not be so deeply rooted. Among these is the teenage girl who engages in promiscuous behavior to become popular. The classic example is the town girl who makes herself available to any college boy who asks her for a date, and who because she is uncertain of his esteem, or to prove that she has value for him, offers her body as well as her company. Such girls are also the feminine element in high school gang bangs. Another type is the girl who feels a strong need to rebel against her parents, and, by extension, against all authority and established value systems. She may well put her ideas into the form of "free love" for all comers and proudly assert her disdain for the judgment of society. Yet behind her behavior is an anxiety that can lead to such excesses as to constitute nymphomania.

Finally, there is the sexually vital but emotionally sterile spinster who desires gratification but has never been able to bring herself to marry. One such case which has come to my attention involved a woman who for thirty years taught school in a middle-sized Midwestern city, retired with expressions of honor and esteem from the school and community, only to have a complete nervous breakdown. During her subsequent treatment it was learned that from the day she began teaching she had systematically and constantly seduced every high school boy in her classes, frequently demanding their services upon threat of failing them, but educating them so tactfully in the arts of sex that none had ever complained of her behavior. A deeper examination of this remarkable performance indicated that the woman had suffered a deep disappointment in a college affair that she had hoped would lead to marriage. Resolving never to be so hurt again, she chose partners too young and callow to pose a threat to her emotional life. Her breakdown came in her fifties when she saw her source of lovers removed by her compulsory retirement.

In pre-Freudian days the nymphomaniac was thought, like many other sexual deviates, to be the victim of glandular malfunction. Today, science has found this to be true in only a very small number of cases. The vast majority suffer some form of psychic disturbance which, however varied and complex, leads to a single manifestation: insatiable desire and compulsive promiscuity. Recognition that the nymphomaniac is in a class with the lesbian, the homosexual, the fetishist and the necrophiliac is, however, still not widespread. Generally, she is looked down upon as lacking moral sense or simple self control. The reason is simple. To the average, normal person, victims of other forms of sexual perversion have appetites that are obviously unnatural and sick; they are self-evidently in need of medical help.

But the nymphomaniac seems to do only what normal women do—except that she does it more often and more promiscuously. Like the satyr, (male nymphomaniac) who is goaded by similar endless compulsions, she is superficially normal. Unlike the satyr, she is denied the admiration and acceptance of her peers or her partners. All of this adds up to a big red danger sign to any man rash enough to seek the favors of such a woman. ● opening plunged a Filipino policeman. Lunging after him were eight wiry fellow cops. It was January 14, 1968, and Madam Paloma's house of China dolls on Mariveles Bay was rocking. As the cops came storming in, one voice was heard over the din:

PASSION TRICKS

"Everybody's under arrest!"

"Por que? We're just rehearsing!"

"Well, you've rehearsed for the last time. Let's go!"

Beside a lewd porcelain statue, a tableau of four beautiful Chinese girls and a white man were acting out a scene from "Mar de Amor," the licentious play. The girl (center) was a willowy brunette with heavy-lidded dark eyes. Her kimono was askew. Seated around her were three other girls. A fragile beauty had one bare leg exposed and the other yet in her costume of barest briefs.

"Chief, some of 'em are getting out the back door!" shouted one of the men, gesturing frantically.

It was the signal for the rest of the patrol to crash a heavy bamboo curtain between the back door and the cobbled streets of the Philippine capital. The cops swarmed after them swinging clubs as they went. A motley group of men and partially-dressed China dolls stumbled into the clutches of the law.

"But I've got to get back to my ship—" protested an American sailor.

"Tough luck!"

"Your tough luck, you mean!" growled the swabbie bringing up his knee. It was the signal for all holy hell to break loose. The girls screamed as Madam Paloma's house became a battlefield. Men grabbed chairs, statues, urns and shattered them over the heads of amazed police. The sailor in shorts seized a Buddha and knocked out the lieutenant as the latter's skull split open and blood spewed over the floor. The slow-to-act cops blew on their whistles and drew guns, finally, ready for action.

In a wild frenzy, Madam Paloma pulled the switches, throwing the whole place in darkness.

THE battle raged on. In stygian darkness Oriental girls—lithe as cats— tore into the upholders of the peace. They bit, scratched, kicked and punched. One of them leaped on the back of an officer. Straddling him as if he were a horse, she beat him with a bronze temple bell until he collapsed in a welter of blood. Madam Paloma tore an antique scimitar from the wall and slashed out blindly at the cops. In the confusion, somebody lit a perfumed candle! A swarthy lumber dealer from the Luzon hills twirled a chairleg.

Three Chinese girls joined hands. Holding a carved jade pillar, they turned themselves into a whiplash by running around the pole. Downing two cops, they knocked them senseless in the fury of their impetus. Then tore them to ribbons stamping, grinding their bodies with jeweled high heels. Two cops pulled them away by their streaming glossy black hair, dragged them to a closet and locked them in.

"Get out of here, Hijos de putas!" screamed Madam Paloma in Spanish above the shrieking bedlam. "Get out of here, you sons of ——!" Besides herself with rage, she kicked out hard at a cop.

Unnoticed in the din and clamor of the brawl, a heavy motorboat roared over Maravilas Bay toward Madam Paloma's establishment.

GEORGEOUS, black-eyed Madam Manetta Paloma was a hot-tempered, high-powered landmark in Manila. Known for her Spanish arrogance and extravagant passions, she had both enemies and friends in high places on Luzon. Sometimes called the Manila man-eater, she devoured with love or hate. Madam Paloma, thirty-two, came from Dumuran in 1954, with nothing but the clothes on her back and Enriquez Mendez, her one-legged servant. She said she left her husband because he made indecent demands. Whatever her past, her present was spectacular.

Setting up shop in a one room apartment, she was soon entertaining masculine Manila in a style to which they were not accustomed. Brilliant, witty and tempestuous, her feverish passion and licentious caprices created a demand she could not supply. Buying the white brick house with the pagoda roof on Maravilas Bay, she searched the island for Chinese girls. They had to be beautiful, voluptuous and depraved. When she could find no more on the islands, she sent Enrique to China to find girls who could fulfill her requirements and speak English or Spanish.

The house was a perfect setting for the exquisite Orientals. The beds were on platforms resembling stages. Heavy white satin draperies could be drawn all around them. Spotlights beamed down on the beds in shades of white, green, blue or red according to the mood of the night. Everything was slanted toward the dramatic. Many of the customers didn't appreciate these refinements and accessories of passion. Some did. They were mostly small time business men, some sailors and officers, lumbermen from the mountains and utility workers around the piers. They all shared one thing, whether they shared the subtleties of Madam Paloma's setting or not. They paid. Madam Paloma took what the traffic would bear.

Getting the girls past immigration authorities was a serious problem. Madam Paloma called them actresses and the house a dramatic school. The stunning slant-eyed actresses were housed in the drama school. Frequent plays were given and the police were not curious or suspicious at the vast numbers of men going in and out. The plays were amorous exhibitions enacted by the Chinese actresses and the patrons. Madam made it a rule that the Chinese harlots could learn but were to speak no Spanish or English—only Chinese.

"Will you pay us in the language of money?" asked one of the busty new girls.

"You'll get 8 percent. The other 22 percent will be held in escrow, against the day when you go to the U.S.A. You'll receive an education you couldn't get anywhere else for any amount of money."

"I'm already educated in that language."

"But you'll also learn the dramatic arts. Remember you are actresses."

"Will we ever get on stage?" pert Ming Gwon demanded.

"Sure. On the exhibition stage downstairs."

THE girls agreed in their singsong patois that there never was anything like Madam Paloma. Benefactor? There are some serious doubts on that score, according to police files. Immigration and dirt cheap sex proved a money-maker to the tempestuous brunette. They also proved her undoing.

In early January, Ming Gwon approached Madam Paloma with a typical question:

"I've been here a year. Aren't I due to go to the States?"

"Of course Ming," said Madam smiling. "You'll be going very soon now. You'll be needing money for new clothes—"

"My aunt says all my Chinese dresses will be sufficient."

"Your aunt is very wise."

"My aunt also says there's quite a Chinese colony in San Francisco."

"Yes, indeed! This afternoon I'll arrange for your passage. You'll be going first class, naturally . . ."

MADAM PALOMA had no intention of either giving the girl a check—not one that she could cash—or did she have any intentions of shiping the China doll to the "States." But when confronted by an emergency of this sort, she deftly side-stepped details by promising the moon. Actually Manetta Paloma had anything but "arrangements" in mind. She found Enrique, her faithful, changing the sheets in the girls' room:

"Never mind that now. You've other things to do!"

"Someone going to the States?"

"Yes," Madam smiled. "You'll arrange things for today. Bring the boat to the house this evening at eight."

He laughed hysterically. "You've certainly got a good racket going for you, Manetta. I must say that I admire your ingenuity."

"Oh, I manage," she said glibly, turning away from her helper.

There was much to do and little time to do it, but Paloma certainly did manage. Calling the girls together, she said:

"Ming Gwon is leaving for the States by her request. I've been able to make the necessary arrangements today—"

All the girls crowded around Ming. "We're so happy for you. Are you getting new clothes?"

"Ming doesn't want new clothes. She wants to save her money." Madam Paloma turned to Ming. "I have the check ready and might as well give it to you now."

"Thank you, Madam Paloma. You've been wonderful to work for and I'm so glad you saved my money for me. If I'd had it, I'd have spent it foolishly."

"All right, girls. We'll celebrate this afternoon with tea and drinks."

THE Chinese chattered happily and drank tea and cocktails. Enrique was out and Madam insisted on serving herself. Time passed quickly.

"Ming, get your things. It's time to go. I've arranged for a short cut through influential friends. We're going to meet the boat and cut red tape."

The gay group went down to the dock as Ming and Madam boarded a cabin cruiser. The Chinese dolls waved and cheered as Enrique took the boat out into the bay. Ming waved back, tears in her eyes.

"Don't cry, Ming. This should be the happiest day of your life."

The boat cut the choppy water of Maravilas Bay as the night winds churned the waves. There was silence around them and open water. The lights of Manila glimmered on the shore.

The motor conked out.

"What's the matter, Enrique? Engine trouble?"

"Nothing I can't fix with a wrench."

MING was peering ahead into the darkness as Enrique stealthily came forward into the bow, holding the Stilson securely. He crept up behind the girl. Suddenly she turned. Her eyes dilated in terror as she sat motionless for a second. Then she screamed and jumped away from him.

"Madam Paloma, he's crazy! Enrique's gone mad!"

But Madam Paloma was not on deck. Ming ran to the stern and tried to enter the cabin. It was locked. As she stood there beating her hands on the door and calling to Manetta Paloma, Enrique lifted the wrench high and smashed it down on the girl's head again and again. She sank to the deck with a thud as death rattled in her throat.

"It's done, Manetta. You can come up now."

Manetta Paloma opened the cabin door, stepping over Ming's body.

"Have you got the stones ready?"

They started to shove Ming's body into a burlap bag along with bricks and large stones.

"Be sure to tie it up tight, Enrique. Here, give it to me. You put the stones in the suitcases."

While Ming's body was made ready, Enrique weighted and tied the suitcases. He didn't have enough stones for both, but not wanting to send Manetta Paloma into one of her rages, he said nothing. They dumped the cases and the body into the black water.

"Let's get back fast. I hate these trips, but they're necessary."

Madam Paloma entered the house to find the evening crowd had already taken over. Everybody was having a hell of a time. Some of the girls asked if Ming had gotten the boat for the U.S.A. They celebrated her good fortune and their own at getting in with the beneficent Madam Paloma.

SEVERAL days later another girl came to Madam Paloma with the usual request for piled up salary and determination to go to the States. Madam compiled with her usual courtesy and wrote out the sizeable check.

"Enrique, can you manage without me tonight? It's a big evening ahead, and I should stay here."

"I can handle it, Manetta. I've got it down to a system now so don't worry."

The celebrating clients started arriving early. The mood was gay. Soon the debauchery reached a zenith. Madam Paloma, always in demand, was rushed phenomenally, going up and down stairs with the regularity of a metronome. Hearing several cars drive up, she glanced out of a window to see who and how many were coming. Horrified, she saw police.

"Put on your costumes, girls. Hurry! It's the cops!"

When the law burst in she thought she could handle them, talk them into believing that an innocent play was being enacted. They wouldn't buy it, nor would they buy anything else. She was still hoping that the raid could be turned into a celebration, when the sailor started slugging the cop. Entering the brawl with her Spanish temper blazing, she recklessly fought and kicked with the girls. Stepping behind the cops as they tangled with outraged patrons and crazed girls, she kneed them from the rear, using a heavy brass ceremonial gong. The cops were bloody and almost beaten. Madam Paloma was contemplating dumping them off the boat when Enrique came back, when bright lights flooded the ghastly blood-soaked scene.

"Don't anybody move!"

Legal reinforcements were rounding them up. It was all over but the talking.

"Aside from assault and battery what are the charges?" she sneered at the chief.

"Murder, Madam."

"Wha—?"

"Don't look so surprised. I don't know yet how many scores of helpless Chinese bodies you've dumped in the bay but I intend to find out down at headquarters."

"You'll have to prove it!" she said belligerently.

"I can't—yet. But this much I know: You've been using this house for purposes other than specified. These girls aren't actresses, they're prostitutes!"

"Go on. I'm listening."

He smiled vaguely. "What's more, some of your girls have been found floating in the bay. Suitcases and clothing will be coming up next."

Just then the flabbergasted Enrique burst in. Four burly Filipino cops grabbed him. Manetta Paloma whirled on him.

"Fool! I told you to weight those bodies!"

"But I did!"

"He's right, Madam." The police chief smiled. "We didn't have that information until you so graciously gave it to us."

Manetta flew into a towering rage from which she never recovered. Dragged off stage from her amazed and battered Chinese dolls, she was taken to police headquarters where she confessed the whole story. Madam Paloma's grisly house in the old Intramuros section ceased to exist. She was hanged publicly seven months later, after a short trial. Thus ended the career of one of the bloodiest bordellos of all time.

She had something going for her though, for a while . . . ●
